

REGISTRATION

ASEAN AND NON-ASEAN STUDENTS:

Students from ASEAN and Non-ASEAN Countries will be eligible for Scholarship for the Course (Free Course Fee and Accommodation), in competitive based for 10 students.

OTHER PARTICIPANTS:

Students, Professionals, researchers may join the course and pay for the course fee:

Students: 1.000.000 IDR

Professionals: 1.500.000 IDR

Link for registration:

<https://admission.ugm.ac.id/registration/>

SPEAKERS

1. Prof. Mukhtasar Syamsuddin, Ph.D. of Arts (Universitas Gadjah Mada)
2. Agus Wahyudi, Ph.D. (Universitas Gadjah Mada)
3. Dr. Jamie Davidson (National University of Singapore)
4. Prof. Tran Tuan Phong (Vietnam Academy of Social Sciences)
5. Dr. Khin Khin Soe (University of Yangon, Myanmar)
6. Dr. Mi Mi Gyi (University of Mandalay, Myanmar)
7. Dr. Alistair D.B. Cook (NTS Center)
8. Prof. Dato' Dr. Mohammad Agus Yusoff (Universiti Kebangsaan Malaysia)
9. Prof. Pham Van Duc (Vietnam Academy of Social Sciences)
10. Prof. Aris Ananta (ISEAS Singapore)
11. Rossarin Gray, Ph.D. (Mahidol University, Thailand)

ORGANIZER

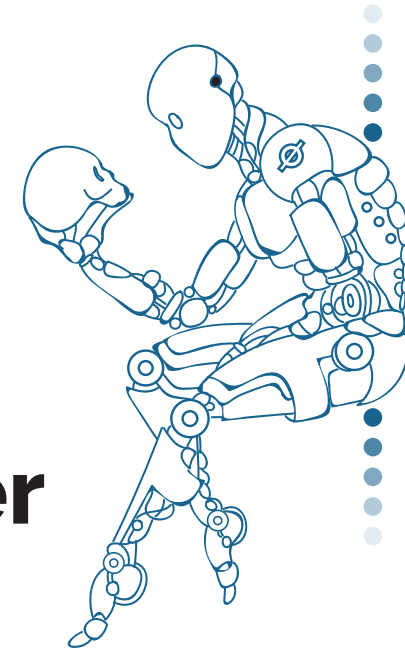

Faculty of Philosophy, Universitas Gadjah Mada, Indonesia

Contact: Adita (oiac.philosophy@ugm.ac.id)

+62 822 4254 0991

for more information

<http://oiac.filsafat.ugm.ac.id/>

summer course on

CONTEMPORARY ISSUES
ON ETHICS AND APPLIED
PHILOSOPHY

8-15
september
2019

ABSTRACT

With the persistence of the pressing and emerging problems in the arena of politics and public policies, questions of the roles of ethics and applied philosophy are matters of great import and urgency. Contemporary issues related to the ethical and philosophical values underlying politics and public policies may cover but not limited to protections of minority groups in democracies, political legitimacies in post-truth society, practices of leadership in delivering public welfares, women rights and the rights of disabled and disadvantaged people, states and international communities' roles in mitigating the gap between the richest and the poorest, institutionalization of civil and political rights and attempts by many leaders to forge national identity and to explore the foundational political principles better apply to the lives of their societies.

Among students, academics and researchers alike, to recognize such contemporary ethical and practical philosophical issues and to address them in a professional manner remain necessary and relevant today as in the past. Yet, the nature of ethics and applied philosophy, and the possible contributions of the discipline to politics and public policy may still be far from settled. As the debate remains, for instance, with regard to the sources of the moral content and the established practices of politics and public policies nexus, new imaginaries of ideal society are always welcome and open, while the new contributions of thoughts, and concepts to the contemporary issues of ethics and applied philosophy have become more necessary.

Course on “Contemporary Issues on Ethics and Applied Philosophy” is designed to address the needs to make ethics and practical philosophy thriving again with respect to the contemporary political and public policies challenges in Indonesia and beyond. It offers a wide variety of topics that are supposedly practical and yet theoretically challenging issues to include such theme as: Pancasila as ethical foundation for political judgment; pollster and political legitimacy; political leadership and financial conflict of interests; truth, fake news and the rights to know; women participation in politics; freedom of speech and democracy; disability and access to public services; health care services and equity; and international humanitarian aids and state sovereignty.

DATE AND PLACE

Date : 8 – 15 September 2019

Place : Faculty of Philosophy, Universitas Gadjah Mada, Yogyakarta, Indonesia

The course will take place in the Faculty of Philosophy, Universitas Gadjah Mada, Yogyakarta, Indonesia. Universitas Gadjah Mada is Indonesian leading university, established on December 19th, 1949. It is also the oldest and largest state university.

Yogyakarta is known as a student city as well as a heart of Indonesia. Yogyakarta Special Province is also home for 3,400,000 inhabitants and 120 states and private higher educational institutions, with around 300,000 students population. Besides having programs in Yogyakarta, course participants will have time to enjoy Borobudur, Prambanan and Boko Temple, Merapi Mountain, and Geo Park as well as enjoying Indonesian cultures.

LEARNING OUTCOME

After completing the course, participants are expected to be able to:

- Understand fundamentals and principles of Ethics and Applied Philosophy;
- Identify the issues of human life and analyze Ethics and Applied Philosophy;
- Be able to collaboratively learn and work in an international, transdisciplinary and intercultural settings.

METHOD

- The lecture will be delivered in a blended learning method involving lecture and discussion;
- Journals reading and review are also provided during the course;